ENLISTED FOR THE WAR

A Remarkable Meeting of the Republican State Committee,

ALL FACTIONS AND NO FACTION.

The Republican Party Is Lined Up Shoulder to Shoulder With An Enthusiasm Unknown For Years - Usual Interest of National Leaders at Washington in Colonel Stone's Majority.

(Special Correspondence.)

Philadelphia, July 28.—It is the custom to speak of political gatherings as "harmonious," unless there is something like an open disturbance, but the meeting of the Republican state committee to nominate a candidate for the supreme court bench this year was more harmonious than that.

It was a visible and unmistakable notice to all observing persons that whatever has been in the past or may be in store for the future of rivalries within the party, there is for only one kind of freedomlovers in Pennsylvania this year. The primary occasion of the meeting was to name a Republican candidate for judge of the superior court, to succeed the late Judge Wickham. The position was conceded to Senator Andrew J. Wiggin, who was from Beaver county, and the superior court bench is otherwise heavily tilted toward the east, he having been the only member who could see the sun set behind the Allegheny mountains.

The nomination of a new chief justice was given to Senator John P. Gilkeson. Judge William David Porter, of Allegheny county, by Governor Hastings, for the temporary appointment, has clearly indicated him as the likely nominee, and so there was no room for thrilling excitement in the meeting with the distinction of the for which the state committee was called together.

Yet, instead of the profanity gathering of a mere quorum, it was the best and most representative meeting of the committee that has been held for years. Chairman of the committee, Mr. Harry opening remarks, safely rang the keynote of the meeting when he congratulated those present on the comprehensive character of the assemblage, and said that in selecting the executive committee for the coming year the committee had "selected the camp of all factions and of no faction."

Of the recent chairman of the state committee, Quay was the only absentee. Cooper, "the golden haired angel of reconciliation," looking older since he has shifted his ambitions toward congressional politics, was present, and consulted with Andrews, who was succeeded him in the chairmanship. Gilkeson, who was the central figure ex-officio of the civil war '95, sat within ten feet of ex-Congressman Robinson, who took a most active part in the agitation of the civil war '95, and was a member of the committee of 1863.

The then chairman, Magee himself, nominating Judge Porter, who had been chairman of the Republican county committee which faithfully supported him in his efforts to become a national man, had received a hearty ovation.

Wiggin, who was nominated by the committee, was the only one who was not present.

Then came the nomination of the executive committee, and the names of all sorts of Republicans were announced from the platform every syllable was cheered. It was recognized upon the instant that when such men of prominence in the old inter-factional days as Congressman Connor of Scranton, who is a representative of the party trusted leadership of the party; Senator Magee, who has the heart of the party with him in Pittsburg; Lieutenant Governor Lyon and ex-Postmaster James S. McLean, of Philadelphia, who was a member of the executive committee, were announced from the platform every syllable was cheered.
